

Heritage Landmark Criteria

To be recognized as a Charlotte County Heritage Landmark, a resource must meet the following criteria:

- The resource must be a building, structure or site that is at least 50 years old.
- It is historically important in one of the following ways:
 - Significant to architecture, archaeology, local history or traditional culture
 - The site of a significant event that took place at least 50 years ago
 - Associated with a notable person who died at least 50 years ago
- The landmark must visibly retain physical characteristics present during the significant period.
- If moved, the building or structure must have been moved at least 50 years ago or to preserve it from demolition. Reasonable attempts must have been made to assure the similarity of its setting to the original.

In certain cases, resources that are less than 50 years old but historically significant at the statewide or national level may qualify as a Charlotte County Heritage Landmark.
